RH Team/Vilas Janve

South Asian students who participated in the 8th South Asian University Festival, held at Udaipur were amazed by the beauty of the city of Lakes and Palaces. SAUFEST concluded on March 11, in fact opened many new chapters in the hearts of visiting youth coming from Bhutan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, Nepal, Pakistan and India. Each participant was enriched by one or other way. Some liked the scenic beauty of Udaipur, some was highly impressed by the history, some liked the heritage, some paid homage to past heroes at the Haldighati battle field. Most of the young students were happy interact with their counter parts coming from different nations. The students from Bhutan, Bangladesh, Nepal and Sri Lanka were excited to participate in an international event.

The complexes of Mohan Lal Sukhadiya University and Pacific University witnessed various academic and cultural activities. The student's competitive spirit and vigor was visible in all their endeavors. Literary events, Debate (My aspirations), Symposium (Role of entrepreneurship and skill development among youth of South Asia) and Quiz centered Heritage, History, Architecture, Culture and Environment. Participants of Face painting displayed their love towards colors, sensitivity and aesthetic sense. The Posters made by students expressed their concern over the environment and advocacy for being human. The theme for clay modeling was 'Mother and Child'. Most of the students from Science and Literature streams displayed their enormous talent.

'On the spot photography' was one event which attracted a huge lot. Photographer had no dearth of objects and models as to days' youth always likes to be captured by camera. The photographers did their best. The event 'Fashion Show' is most popular activity not only amongst youth but in elders too. Young boys and girls with their traditional attire and improvised fashion wear were very much appreciated by the gatherings at the Vivekanand Auditorium, MLSU and complex of Pacific University.

The performing arts presented had a great variety, but mostly by Indian students. Of course Indian dances like Bhangra, Gidda, Faag, Ghoomar, Lawni, Kalbelia, Bihu, Dandia Rass, Bhavai, Kathak and semi classical dances, Tribal Dangi dance, etc were fascinating. All Indian performances whether dances, Instrumental Music and singing were not only highly enjoyed by the Guests but also documented through video cameras as well as Mobiles.

The amazing performance by the Sri Lankan students mesmerized on lookers. Students from Sri Lanka presented a fusion of folk harvest dance which was supported by melodious voice of two girls. Anika Gurudev Rabinendra Nath Tagore depicting divine love of Radha and Krishna. Anika was accompanied by melodious song which was rendered by her fellow student, Shemonty Monjari of BRAC, University, Bangladesh. Students of Kazi Nazrul Islam University, Dhaka presented Bangla folk songs. Pakistani student, Noman Shehjad, studying in South Asia University, New Delhi sang Hindi filmy song while Nepali student, Sanjana Avasthi from same University presented solo dance. The students from Bhutan presented Mask dance presented by the monks of monastery to drive away evil spirits.

On the whole there were more Indian performances than other SAARC countries. While talking to students, I observed that such festivals certainly help in enhancing the scope of understanding each others culture. The youth is does not believe in political boundaries. South Asian youth attaining progress also believes in traditional culture. Current market forces and films influence them to a great extent.

The 'Chai ki Thadi' in a new avatar

RH Team

Tea no doubt is the most cherished beverages in our country. From waking up early in the morning to rejuvenating after a stressful day, tea is the most adorable and widely available drink. And no matter how unhygienic it is, the tea at a Thadi or a Thhela out in the market or corner of the street remains most favorite of one and all. People who commute on foot to expensive cars stop by a Thadi and enjoy their cuppa. Most of the time this tea is reheated throughout the day, the same tea leaves are boiled many a times, and astonishingly, it still tastes the same and fresh.

Now that the idea of tea at a Thadi is well established, here comes an extension to that idea where the taste remains the same but hygiene and flavors get added for the teetotalers. and one very interesting idea that will attract the people more than anything is the offer of Wi-Fi. "Chaifeteria is India's first wifi chai thela which is run by two young entrepreneurs of the city, Vinish and Shubh Purohit. Vinish is a B.Com 2nd year drop-out, a wrestler and an avid traveler. Shubh is studying M.A in English Literature and is also a writer who has recently wrote his first novel entitled 'She: The Noor of My Eyes'. Shubh has been running different cafes in the city since past three years.

Chaifeteria is one of it's kind wifi chai thela which serves free wifi access to customers, along with 16 different varieties of chai like Hari mirch chai, chocolate chai, irani chai, masala chai, pudina chai and more. They also serve varieties of milk, maggi, maska buns, and cereals.

The vision behind opening chaifeteria was to standardized the image of thela among the people, and to serve hygienic food to the customers. "As we believe that "Wi-Fi" and chai are the daily needs of today's generation so we decided to bring it together for the first time at a thela where people can surf internet, check e-mails while sipping their hot cup of tea," saus the young duo..Also it is a first of it's kind kiosk which also sells products on the kiosk itself, so if one likes the tea they are sipping they can buy it for themselves as we also have our merchandise section with products like 'Homemade Chai Masala' 'strong CTC Assam tea leaves, green tea leaves, chocolate tea leaves, banana chips, potato crispy chips, and chocolate chip cookies.

"Our future plans with our venture is to start more outlets of chaifeteria in Udaipur, and in other parts of the country, also we are going to launch our summer special menu very soon," says Vinish.
