

Royal Harbinger Cold Wave : Winter Has Arrived

Last Sunday, Delhi remained indoors most of the time. Not because it was Sunday but it was the first day when the city shivered. The winter has arrived. The winter that was supposed to be here in north India lot earlier today surprised many with its sudden arrival. Those who were waiting to put on that half sweater suddenly wrapped themselves into heavy coats. It was the time to raise a toast to one of the most beautiful seasons of the year. Tea with Pakoras, longer stay in bed, and all kind of comfort. The weather of Udaipur somewhat remains same as that in Delhi. Joys of winter are endless which come with a simple condition—the condition is that you have a home which is packed from all sides. Yes, this simple luxury that we take for granted is a super luxury for millions. We sitting at the comfort of home wait for the winters but these people with homeless life hate it. They hate it badly. We just need to alter our lifestyle to match with the season but these homeless people have to face more and pinching struggle.

You get shocked to see your kid wandering bare feet inside the cosy room and these people have to see if their kids have at least something to cover their bare bodies. This is same for a kid of few months of few years. We, struggle to find a matching sweater and they hardly have one. The idea of writing and sharing this all with you is not to remind you how fortunate you are, because you know that very well. The entire motive of sharing this comparative picture to you is to suggest you that warm clothes, sweaters, old blankets, and quilts that you are sure will not suit or help you, do discard them right away. Do not keep your closets occupied. Set that space free. Now pack up these discarded clothes in a small bag and then lock this up into the boot space of your car or simply pick one of these and tuck into the basket or bag of your two wheeler.

Now, whenever you go out, keep an eye on deprived people who would need that one warm cloth the most. And feel glad and great that you have done something for which God will smile at you.

This is just one way you can easily help the real needy ones. Many of us let our maids have all the things that we do not use. It's good and indeed is a great help but at times we must look around too to see if there is someone who needs our help badly and more than the maid does. Giving to a maid since is an easy way to donate, we offer all what we have to her only. But help itself is a way to serve God. And despite we have a temple at home, we go out to a temple to visit the God. Similarly to meet the real needy ones and help them directly, you will have to step out.

Many of us write a cheque to an NGO or simply order a blanket or two to an organization and feel that we have done it. It helps indeed. But many people are already doing that. Still when you go out any night after 9 P.M any wintry night, you will find many deprived ones sleeping on the footpath sans any covering. If you just cover one of them personally and quietly, the person will directly be benefitted and will open a million wishes to you. There is no need to ensure he or she sees you. But that feeling of covering a shivering body with a warm blanket is unmatched. Try and then feel that warmth forever. Happy Giving!

Padma Vibhushan Prof. R.A Mashelkar, Former Director General of the Council of Scientific & Industrial Research (CSIR) said, "I heartily congratulate the granddaughters of the day. We must realize that we are entering into a challenging VUCA world which is volatile, uncertain, complex and ambiguous. MNIT as an institution over the years has fully equipped its students with skills and tools to deal with the challenges of the world confidently. 'Education in innovation' and 'Innovation in education' are the dire needs of the hour. World class universities will need to achieve this twin goal and MNIT Jaipur must have a dream to become a world class institution with seamless integration of education, research and innovation. Education disseminates known knowledge and Research creates new knowledge. 'Ambience without Ambition and Ambition without Ambience has no consequences. MNIT has one of the best campus which is fully equipped to create bright ambitious young talent for the nation.'

Padma Vibhushan Professor R.A Mashelkar also elaborated on three pillars for creating world class universities which included, excellence, autonomy and governance. He said, "Excellence- where mere teaching without research is futile. Uncompromising excellence in both teaching and research is important. Autonomy- where autonomy or flexibility must flow across the university from teachers to students. Governance- where governance structure of Universities must change with changing times. Transparent regulatory mechanism that ensures accountability will instill a sense of confidence in the academic community and the society as well." He shared his 10 golden rules to success such as a) Your aspirations are your possibilities b) Be limitless in your imagination as there is no limit to human endurance, human achievement and human imagination c) There is no substitute for hard work d) There is no instant success e) Success is not an accident f) Do not wait for opportunities to knock the door, if the opportunity does not knock, build a door g) Remember that; Innovator is the one who sees what everyone else sees but thinks what no one else think h) Continue to be creative i) Remember, innovator is the one who does not know that it cannot be done j) Every India must stand for innovation and not inhibition or imitation.

Padma Shri Dr. Upendra Kaul, Executive Director - Academics & Research (Cardiology), Fortis Escorts Heart Institute said, "I feel honored and privileged to be invited for the 10th Convocation ceremony at MNIT, Jaipur. Being a graduate from an esteemed institution such as MNIT, which has a track record of repute, puts a tremendous responsibility on the shoulders of this young talent. It is important that one must not forget to serve the people of their own nation, living at the bottom of the pyramid and uplift their lives through concepts of smart cities which have been declared by our hon'ble Prime Minister. It is also important that one must not neglect the sectors already neglected such as healthcare, education and must build in-house technology, infrastructure and retain the talent that has been driven offshore for better opportunities. The graduating talent must invest in education, healthcare, R&D and create the right atmosphere for positive growth."

Prof. Upendra Kaul concluded by mentioning that, Work-Life-Balance is utmost important. To maintain these one must take care of both the body and mind which is most of the times neglected. He concluded with a teaching from Swami Vivekanand, 'Teach yourself, teach everyone, his/her real nature, call upon the sleeping soul and see how it awakes. Power will come, glory will come, goodness will come, purity will come and everything that is excellent will come when this sleeping soul is roused to self-conscious activity which is in the interest of the well-being of the members of the society.'

Prof. I.K Bhatt, Director, Malaviya National Institute of Technology said, "I thank Padma Vibhushan Prof. R.A Mashelkar and Padma Shri Dr. Upendra Kaul to take time out of their schedules and make their presence at the MNIT's 10th Convocation Ceremony. It is a prestigious occasion where such eminent personalities have come together to not just grace the occasion but their presence has also motivated our students genuinely. The institute has recruited faculty from across the globe having merit and this has drawn researchers and faculty having a combination of merit and diligence.
