English Language Teaching in India :Problems and Innovations

English has a status of associate language, but in fact it is the most important language of India. After Hindi it is the most commonly spoken language in India and probably the most read and written language in India. English in India is used not only for communicating with the outside world, but also for inter-state and intrastate communication. Keeping in view this use of English Language Dr Pankaj Vyas, Associate Prof. in S.S. College of Engineering, Udaipur and Dr Mehzeen Sadiwala, Assistant Prof. in J.R.N. Rajasthan University, Udaipur come out with a book under the title : English Language Teaching in India, Problems and Innovations. This book is sure going to serve all the students of English Language and open the new door of learning even to non -English students. English is progressively being deemed as a 'must-know' language in India. It is rather intriguing to observe that in a multilingual country, regardless of official language policies designed to support the use of regional languages in educational contexts, English is in fact used in all the areas of everyday living in the country. It is the language of administration and education, and furthermore jobs in India continue to require fluency in English.

People make things possible

Udaipur : Mukhyamantri

Jal Swawlamban campaign these days is being heard everywhere. This campaign is making things better in all marked villages across the district. The implementation of the campaign is being done at a swift pace taking all the agencies and help groups into consideration. Each of the agencies and people involved are targeting to complete all the water storage and related tasks by June 30 which is the date set. This will ensure that all the measures being taken to conserve the rainwater in coming season become successful.

From ground level worker to top officials, all are constantly monitoring and working round the clock for the success of this mission. The project not only is an ambitious attempt by the government to provide enough water for all needs but it also aims at improving lives of people. Earlier in the Baara village of Girva circle, a naaka was constructed with dimensions of 140 x 8 x 12. It used to collect the rainy water from a 14 kilometer square of area. The capacity of the naaka was about 5.5 lacs of liters but now this naaka has been filled with the soil that used to flow in with the water.

Now after all the hard work from volunteers and government support, the dam is now getting a good shape and increased capacity. Now this Naaka of Baara which stands renovated and upgraded with capacity is all set to quench the thirst of not only adjoining areas but also of nearby places. a small canal of 900 meters will help along. 600 meters of the canal is already concreted while the remaining 300 meters of canal will be cemented soon after the crops are cut. Now this Naaka will have additional capacity of 500 cubic feet which could not only be possible due to consolidation of the dam and construction of the canal. The greenery around will further ensure that people come here for tourism as well. Tribal people are very pleased to see this dam in function. They now will have water round the year and all their needs besides farming will be met with ease. Such scenario is Rajasthan is very promising of course. The main reason why such examples are making history is because people have taken things in their hands. The public participation has been unprecedented. Earlier where people used to stay away from public works, now they are taking full interest and taking charge of their things. Home minister in a review meeting recently acquired the feedback of the campaign while secretary in charge Ravishankar Shrivastava stressed upon pushing the activeness towards the campaign. District collector Rohit Gupta further instructed officials to inspire more people for more participation.

Rajkumar Rinvas has also asked to expedite other water conservation projects in forests for more water storage. With general public, even army is participating in water conservation activities which is further motivational to the people.

The success of the Baara dam (Naaka) is an example of how aware public can bring in the difference and with the help of administration can bring the sea change in life.

Being a fair Media

From reporting news as it is to delivering verdict, media has come a long way. There was a time when news used to be very important part of the day and people would spend that one hour in front of TV or beside a radio set to know what was happening across the world. Now we have 24 hours running channels. There are hundreds of such channels which serve you news is delivered has a strong impact on the listener and they begin to believe the idea being floated. But now these days so many channels are being aired and most coming with one side or other of the issue, people have started labelling channels with political parties. And this is done by the people who find news opposing their party. One news against your political party and people start a campaign to label the news channel as biased. Well, all this is not good at all for the healthy social and political environs of the country. A news channel is generally aired across the world and entire world sees what's happening in a country. And when it's India, people take plenty of interest. If one channel is laying a positive growth story of the government another is questioning it, it does not help the cause of India that needs investment and for which a positive framework of trust and sustainable growth is needed. True, that media must highlight all the wrongdoings, corruptions, and exploitation in as it is color but the same time, the same media also must showcase a growth story of the country. Media is a very powerful tool to keep people informed and aware. It must understand that if they keep on painting one-sided story of the matter, soon people will start ignoring it. Each story should be a balanced one. All important questions must be asked and answers must be presented without any coloring. Today the youth is very smart. Any lie would nose-dive in no time. Also the analysis that these channels present cannot fool people for a long time. So anyways the truth will come out and then the channel that doctored the image of any incident will lose all the credibility. In the wake of recent JNU developments, it has been proved that media can be important tool but at the same time some channels that allegedly played fake videos have lost their credibility. There could be a bunch of people who would have liked these doctored videos but people at large felt cheated. Its time media takes the responsibility and stop conducting media trials. Reporting should be clean and simple without any coloring. Let the people see and decide what exactly should be the takeaway.

Awareness on inculcating a Zero Harm Culture, during National Safety Week

Udaipur : Vedanta Limited, India's only diversified natural resources company observed the 45th National Safety Week across its operations. The week-long activity, from 4 - 10th March, 2016 highlighted Vedanta's priority towards the safety of the employees and inculcating a zero harm culture.

"Safety is an imperative to Vedanta's vision of long-term sustainable development as well as crucial to maintain the 'Licence to Operate'. The importance of a zero harm workplace from business, leadership and human perspective is critical and the company follows global benchmarking standards in terms of adhering to safety procedures, work environment and safety infrastructure. Every business leader must be passionately committed to their workforce's safety," says Tom Albanese, CEO, Vedanta.

Safety is a core value and a part of the company's long-term business goals. In FY15, the company imparted over 750,000 hours of safety training to employees and contractors. The Lost Time Injury Frequency Rate (LTIFR), a unit of measuring productive time lost as a result of worker injury, reduced substantially from 0.54 to 0.46 in FY15 (YoY).

All Vedanta's companies have adopted a robust approach to hazard identification and risk assessment studies, which is conducted phase-by-phase. In terms of certification, 45/52 sites of the company are OHSAS 18001 approved.

Key Highlights of the National Safety Week: The company's aluminium operations in Lanjigarh (Odisha) organised a 'safety march' and urged all the workers to make safety a habit. Around 1,300 students in the area participated in Safety-themed competitions, promoting the practice among the country's future leaders. At the operations in Jharsuguda (Odisha), employees participated in safety-themed quiz competitions to highlight its importance.

At its aluminium operations in Korba (Chhattisgarh), BALCO, organized a marathon or a 'Run for Safety' to mark the event. A special workshop on safety for women was also conducted. Street theatre, safety themed quiz and informative seminars were organized to spread the message among the workers and their families. Cairn India, in Rajasthan, marked the National Safety Week by stressing on the importance of 'Strengthening safety movement to achieve zero harm' through various competitions and screening of films. Vedanta's Sustainable Development Framework guides site teams to consider employees and contractors when developing their management systems. When it comes to workforce safety, there is no difference between a contract worker and an employee.

Bollywood is the sobriquet for the hindi language film industry, based in Mumbai. The term is used as to refer to the whole of Indian cinema. Raja harishchandra (1913) is known as the first silent feature film made in india but the first sound film was alam ara which was released in 1931.

And then, a need was felt to honour the people for their excellence in cinematic achievements, as a result 'the times group' started filmfare awards in 1954 to honour both artistic and technical excellence of professionals in the hindi language film industry, which is one of the oldest film events in india, in which only 5 awards were presented at the starting. But with time, the categories had grown upto to 37. With time, a total of 9 award functions are being held now, which are as follows : - Screen Awards, Stardust awards, Apsara awards, vshantaram awards, Global Indian film awards, Zee cine awards, international Indian film academy (IIFA), Times india film awards (Toifa) including filmfare.

All the technical persons, are being honored during all the award functions, but till now, the category for best hair and make-up artist had not been introduced in any of the award functions inspite of "IIFA" awards which has only make-up category.

Like other technical people, hair and make-up artist had also played on important role since the first Indian film had been made. Their contribution to create a beautiful and screen appealing face can't be ignored and till now, many make-up and hair artists had created stunning and beautiful looks Indian for the whole film fraternity.

On the other hand, Oscar award which is the oldest and biggest film award function had been honoring hair and make-up artist since 1981 for their outstanding contribution in cinemas.

Why till now, hair and make-up artist are not being given their due for their hard work and passion which they put on making a hero and heroine like fairy tale characters.

Their contribution is also as important as any other technical teams. A movie is incomplete without them, they makes a normal looking person a superstar, an old person, an ugly person etc. so, we now demand that with the padma awards, a hair and make-up artist should be honoured for their contribution in film fraternity awards too.

And we congratulate the team of hair and make-up artist (Damian martin, Lesley varderwalt and elka wardega) for best hair and make-up design for 'mad max- fury road' at Oscar awards 2016.

If you colour regularly, use shampoo and conditioner which is made for coloured hair only. Take hair spa in a week.

Antiseptic hair oil: 100ml olive oil, 50ml coconut oil, 50 ml mustard oil, mint leaves 10, been leaves 10, basil leaves 12.Boil these in an iron pan. Use a strainer to strain this oil when it is cool. Apply if you are suffering from itchy scalp, flaking or dandruff.

Lost Paradise

We have run out of colours,
Our ears thirst for the sound of feathers,
All around we see a dull shade of brown and grey,
All green and blue has become it's prey,
A dullness untouched by the bright wings of the butterfly,
A silence unbroken by the humming of the bees we no longer spy,
Let's get our colours back,
Let's get our music back,
We have to wake up and rise to regain our paradise.

Cochlear implant operation @ mewar hospital Udaipur

Udaipur. His hearing ability disappear causing mental infection when he was just of 5, later he lost his parents. No one to take care off. There after sunil from village Hathai District Dungerpur was brought up by patidar Society in the village.society took pains to resolve his deaf problem. They visited various hospitals and consulted doctors they told expenses of 12 to 15 lacks for treatment. At last Dr. Prakash Dangi from patidar society contacted Dr. Chagan, the ENT specialist, to operate kindly. Dr. Chagan operated the ear of sunil on 12th march successfully in mewar hospital at Bedla Udaipur.Dr. Manish chaparwal director of mewar hospital helped said Cochlear implants aim to provide useful hearing to children who get little or no benefit from hearing aids. Implants consist of an external speech processor and an internal component. To understand how a cochlear implant works it is first necessary to understand how hearing ears hear and process sound. In hearing ears, sound waves cause changes in air pressure in the canal, which make the eardrum vibrate. These vibrations pass into the inner ear, or cochlear, which is filled with fluid. The cochlear is like a snail in shape. If you imagine it rolled out, it resembles a piano keyboard in that it has low notes at one end and high notes at the other. All along the cochlear there are thousands of very sensitive cells called hair cells. When a sound is made the fluid in the cochlear moves and stimulates these hair cells to send a small electrical charge to the auditory (hearing) nerve. This small electrical current passes along the nerve to the brain where it is understood as sound. If the cochlear has damaged hair cells it will not be able to effectively change sound vibrations into an electrical current. A cochlear implant makes up for the lack of intact hair cells by placing an electrode array (with several electrode contacts) within the cochlear. This delivers sound and speech information directly to the auditory nerve by way of small electrical currents. Unlike hearing aids, which make sound louder, a cochlear implant bypasses the non-functional parts of the ear and delivers small electrical signals directly to the auditory nerve.

By the way: I am a woman

By the way, I am a woman, Woman of today. Woman who knows no boundaries. I don't have fears in my mind. I am ready to take risks. I have a family but I can walk alone. I am working to earn not only bread and butter but also luxurious items.

By the way I am a woman who is a fighter. I was considered as soft hearted and loving creature who can only take care of her family. But I never knew that I had wings ,with them I can fly high in the sky of hopes.

One day I woke up and found myself all alone, struggling in the battle field of life. I was a daughter, sister, wife and mother but I forgot the truth that first of all I am a human being who is made of flesh and blood. I am a woman who was cursed for everything. I was cursed to take birth. I was cursed to be born as a woman. I was humiliated several times for being born as a woman. I was scolded. My heart was broken when I started my journey. Wounds were not healed properly and blood was shedding whenever I took a step forward to go. Males raped my soul and females tried to kill me when I was unborn. Everyday become a new struggle for me.

Was this my fault to be born as a woman?

From the very first day when I was born, I was struggling to find a way to be secure in life. I was not at all safe in all ages.

I was told not to go outside at nights, I was told to cover myself from tip to toe.

It was not my mistake to take birth as a woman. I was not wished to take birth. But by the way I am born and by the way I am a woman now.

I want to fly high, I want to change this world. I have that potential. I have that power to make a better world.

I am a home maker, I am a creator. God has created me to spread happiness. I can create life on earth. I am the ray of hope for today and future generation. Give me hope, give me power to think. Don't snatch away my happiness by your remarks. Wisdom is my best friend and I believe in humanity. Make my journey smooth or I will make a road of dreams where everything is possible. Be feminity my weapon. Let me breath in fresh air of freedom. I want to be a woman, a woman of today. By the way , let me do whatever I want to do. Create a world for me which is comfortable, safe and free from worries. Let me live peacefully and let me die safely.
