OMG: Diapers are Crying

Shruti is only 5 years old. She is lying on a hospital bed surrounded by machines. Her pain is immeasurable. Her eyes are fixed on the ceiling with no dreams.

Arushi went outside to buy onions but never came back. She was 11.

Parul is in coma. Two males raped her so badly that her rectum ripped out.

These are not merely stories of brutal rapes. These stories show the crashing values of our society.

I have written many times on the causes of such heinous crimes but these crimes did not stop. Everyday one or two rape stories with small kids pop up on the screens of our modern tv sets. We scream with pain and fear. Candle marches and protests against such crimes have become routine part of our lives.

Raping a girl may be a pleasure game for rapists but the scars on her body and mind are irreparable.

Diapers are bleeding everywhere with bitten lips and damaged organs.

Are we humans? Its a big question. Are not we equally responsible for this damage?

We repeatedly say that girls are not safe anywhere. We blame others for this damage all the time. We question ourselves that can't we make our daughters strong mentally and physically?

This may be right for young girls but what about small children who can't save themselves. How can a diaper baby fight with a mature male who is ready to harm her with all his might?

Sometimes being strong and courageous is not enough because a small baby can not learn karate at the age of 1. We have not developed any technology yet which can make our new borns physically strong more than males.

Actually we have never taught males not to rape. We are protecting girls not to get raped since ages. Now the voracious face of modern society has been revealed. Mothers have raised beasts in the form of sons who don't respect women because they have been taught to behave insanely with women in daily lives.

Mothers feel proud when sons abuse their sisters or other girls. Males are treated as Gods in our society. Families distribute sweets when boys are born but they don't accept girl children easily.

No matter how far you throw trash, it will return to you some day. Similarly the way you are growing the new generation of males, they will only harm you in future.

The low mentality of few males have been spreading like an epidemic and rape has become a fun game for them.

Pornographic material is easily accessible on internet. It's like a live bomb that we are holding in our hands. Physical illness can be cured but mental illness can not be realised until the harm is being done.

I have seen many people who give their opinions on such sick people with confidence that they can never harm anyone. We don't live with these people 24*7. How can we comment with confidence that they are not culprits?

Survey reports say that the most mentally sick people look simple and sober. Its not that we should see every male with doubt but it is really important to frame our opinion based on facts rather than emotions. May be one person looks harmless from outside but he may be dangerous from inside. There is no parameter to measure his thoughts. Porn sites are visited by all age groups. The latest crime was done by children aged 6 to 12 by watching porn movie on internet.

Its better not to save any male who has been charged in any rape case. Let Police and Law decide their fate. Think about the weeping mothers of rape victims and try to raise your sons who must value girls. Stop producing human bombs who are finishing our babies.

Diapers are crying with pain and fear. Please come forward to save them.

Rajasthan Association for Studies in English will organize Prof. S.N.Joshi Memorial Lecture every year

Prof. H.S.Chandalia Udaipur: Rajasthan Association for Studies in English will organize a Prof. S.N.Joshi Memorial Lecture every year in the annual conferences to keep his memory alive. This was announced in a meeting organized to pay a tribute to Prof. S.N.Joshi at the department of English, M.V. S. College by Prof. H.S. Chandalia, Vice President of the Association. Former Head, Department of English, Mohan Lal Sukhadia University, Udaipur Prof. S.N.Joshi was a legendary figure in the world of English Literature. On June 20th, 2018 he passed away. He was suffering from diabetes and had developed some infection in his kidneys. He was undergoing treatment at Udaipur. He had to be taken for dialysis, twice a week. On 20th June, 2018 also as a routine he was taken to Pacific Hospital for dialysis. His reports were better and doctors were happy to see improvement. At about 2.00pm he came home and took some liquid energy drink. Then he lay down on his bed as usual. About 3.30pm his son in law Dr. Lalit Pandey went near him and seeing no movement, called his wife. They discovered that Prof. Joshi had breathed his last in sleep. Doctors were immediately called who rushed in but found that Prof. Joshi was no more. Prof. S.N.Joshi was cremated the same day. Prof. S.N. Joshi was the motivation behind the formation of Rajasthan Association for Studies in English. He was the President of Rajasthan Association for Studies in English from the day of its formation to the day he breathed his last. The Association grew in his leadership from an initial membership of fourteen to nearly two hundred and fifty. He was the one who helped in framing the constitution of the Association. Fourteen conferences were successfully organized in his guidance and leadership. His novel ideas and scholarship were a guiding force for the Association. The topics of all the conferences were decided in his consultation.

Prof. S. N. Joshi was born on 9th November, 1934. His father was Shri. Jamuna Dutt Joshi and mother was Smt. Parvati Joshi. He belonged to Uttarakhand but got his education in Indore, Madhya Pradesh. After earning his Master's in English Literature, he was selected as a lecturer in English and joined Government College, Chittorgarh in 1962. For two years he served there. In 1965 when Udaipur University came into existence, he joined the department of English, Udaipur University. This very University came to be known as Mohan Lal Sukhadia from where he retired in 1994.

A Walking - talking Encyclopedia

Prof. Joshi was not just a teacher of English, he was a great scholar of Sanskrit, Pali, Persian and could use French with equal ease. Prof. Mukta Sharma, Head of the department of English, Janardan Rai Nagar Rajasthan Vidyapeeth University said that Prof. Joshi was referred to as a walking - talking encyclopedia by scholars every where. Mr. Amba Lal Damami, a well known art and music critic said that Prof. Joshi was a versatile genius. He knew in great depth the nuances of Music and art too. Mr. Damami chaired the meeting. Dr. Paritosh Chandra Dugar mentioned Prof. Joshi as a teacher Par excellence. He never spared any opportunity to learn anything new. He had a great thirst for knowledge. Dr. Anil Paliwal said that Prof. Joshi was not just a doyen of literature but was also a socio-linguist. He had great insight in issues related to semantics. Dashrath Singh Rao said that he was fortunate to have studied as one of thousands of the students of Prof. Joshi. Dr. Anant Dhadich paid his tribute by mentioning his association with Prof. Joshi during the conferences organized by RASE particularly one on travel writing. He stated that Prof. Joshi remembered the poems of Harivanshrai Bachchan and could recite them at length. Prof. Sudha Chaudhary said that she met Prof. Joshi as a student of Philosophy when she was engaged in her Ph.D. research. He proved to be a great source of philosophical knowledge and insight that the relationship grew day by day. She said that Prof. Joshi was a true human being and a devoted scholar. He had read Rig Veda in original Sanskrit and Buddhist texts in original Pali. He was a keen student of Marxism and had read writings of Karl Marx in details and was in constant touch with the latest developments in Marxist thought. Comrade D.S. Paliwal mentioned the institution "Lokayat" which was founded by Prof. Joshi. He said that Prof. Joshi was also interested in the study of indigenous communities of the world, their literature and culture. Dr. Tarana Parveen said that the students of Prof. Joshi loved him. He was easily accessible to them. Talk of any topic under the sky and he would be able to provide detailed information without a moment's delay. Dr. Manji Barupal said that he never talked of anything but academics. He was always positive and motivating the students to study. He led a very austere life and never cared for worldly splendor and fame. His home was a perfect abode of simplicity, scholarship and love. Prof. H.S. Chandalia said that many of us may not be aware that Prof. Joshi was an active trade unionist. He was one of the very active members of teacher's movement. In addition he was the President of Trade Unions Coordination Committee of Udaipur for many years. Dr. Mehzaabeen Sadrwala, Dr. Pankaj Vyas, Arjun Singh Rathore, Anurag Tripathi, F.L. Suthar, Prof. L.R. Patel, Dr. Farhat Banu and a number of scholars and activists participated in the meeting and paid rich tributes to Prof. S.N. Joshi. Dr. Lalit Pandey, former Registrar and son-in-law of Prof. S.N. Joshi was also present in the meeting. Dr. K.S. Kang, Joint secretary of RASE convened the meeting and said that he had a long association with Prof. Joshi. When Prof. Joshi's brother used to study in the Sainik School, Chittorgarh, Prof. Joshi used to visit him. There he had the opportunity to meet him and later the academic relationship also grew. Towards his later years Prof. Joshi had started devoting his time to the study of oriental literature. He read the Buddhist texts in original for which he learnt Pali language. He was well versed in Sanskrit classical texts and could recite with ease from several of them. He developed his interest in philosophy so much that many professors of Philosophy would go to his house and discuss questions of philosophy with him. His house was like a "Rishi Ashram" where the Upanishad of academic discussion always flourished. This interest did not prevent him from using the latest technological and IT resources. He used his computer with equal ease and searched latest developments in the fields of his interest. A genius like Prof. Joshi who labored hard to acquire more and more knowledge each day is a rare gift of nature not so easily found.
