Three Cheers for Ladu – the wonder kid from Dariba

Udaipur: How often do we see a father’s death turning out to be a motivational factor for a young kid! Well, 14-year-old Ladu Lal Jatiya from Naya Dariba has promised himself ever since to live his father’s dream of becoming a footballer.

It took Ladu and his mother (Tipu Bai) several months to begin the process of resetting their lives – they had lost not only a loving husband/father, but also the sole bread-winner of the family. Tipu Bai had no option left except to turn to their farm fields to support Ladu and his three younger sisters.

When Ladu’s father was alive, he would often take Ladu to their neighbour’s home to watch a football match. More than the game, young Ladu was always amazed to see people in that room, passionately and loudly cheering for their teams. Once his father passed away, football became Ladu’s way of remembering his father.

Ladu now wakes up every morning and rides the 6 km from his home on his bicycle to reach the Zinc Football Community Coaching Centre in Dariba, an initiative by Hindustan Zinc. A regular in his training sessions, football is the new constant in Ladu’s life. And Ladu’s coach is very certain that Ladu’s hard work and dedication will certainly one day bring loud cheers for Ladu.

Veeru Devgn, dies in Mumbai

Actor Ajay Devgn’s father Veeru Devgn died in Mumbai on Monday. He used to work as a stunt director in Bollywood movies. According to a report in Mid-day, he was admitted in Surya Hospital, Santacruz, Mumbai. His funeral will be held at Vile Parle crematorium on Monday evening at 6pm. Veeru had worked on 80 films such as Lal Baadshah and Ishq. He even directed Hindustan Ki Kasam in 1999, which starred Amitabh Bachchan, Ajay and Manisha Koirala.

Vicky Kaushal’s father and stunt director Sham Kaushal expressed grief at Devgn’s death. “RIP Veeru Devganji. Just came to know about this sad news. As an Action Director always ahead of his time and as a human being par excellence. I became a stuntman with his blessings on 8th August, 1980 as he signed my application to become a stuntman and made me part of his team,” he wrote in a tweet.

Talking about his father a few years ago, Ajay had said he was his true Singham. “The Singham in my life can only be my father. Because he is a man who came to Bombay at that point in time with ‘4 in his pocket.

For country I am PM, for you I am MP and ‘sevak’

Varanasi, Chemistry had triumphed over poll arithmetic, Prime Minister Narendra Modi said on Monday, profusely thanking Varanasi voters for electing him by a huge margin. “Political analysts will have to accept that beyond poll arithmetic there is chemistry,” he told party workers on his first visit to his constituency after his resounding victory which was by a higher margin this time. “For the country I am the PM, but for you I am your MP, I am your sevak,” he said.

“Work and workers create wonders,” Modi said, giving full credit for his victory to the workers at the grassroots level for creating awareness about his government’s policies and programmes for the people. Uttar Pradesh is showing the way for India, he said.

He also spoke of importance of “perfect synergy” between the government and the party. The Prime Minister said he was also grateful to his opponents who fought against him. At the same time, he lamented that there was a sense of political untouchability, adding that BJP workers were being killed for their ideology in West Bengal, Tripura and Kerala.

His remarks assumed significance in the light of the murder of a BJP leader in Amethi in the first post-poll violence in Uttar Pradesh.

Modi, who also offered prayers at the Kashi Vishwanath temple here, visited the temple town four days after steering his party to a huge win. The Modi-led BJP won 303 out of the 542 seats in the Lok Sabha.
