WOMEN ARE THE SUTRADHAR AT VEDANTA, SAYS ANIL AGARWAL

Mumbai: Women are the 'sutradhar' that keeps the one lakh-strong Vedanta family together, Chairman Anil Agarwal said while addressing a virtual town hall meeting with employees and their families to celebrate International Women's Day.

"If a woman is convinced and she puts her mind into a task, she can deliver 110% results," the Vedanta chairman said, while urging women to believe in themselves.

"Choose an idea and put your heart and mind into it. Do something only when you are convinced about it, not because you have to do it or you have been asked to do it," he said.

Mr Agarwal encouraged women to pick up an activity outside their daily lives, be it a full-time or a part-time engagement and contribute to society. "There is nothing a woman cannot do. You only have to develop a mindset of being able to achieve it," he added. There are nearly two crore women in India who can contribute to the society in a significant way, provided they get the right opportunity, he pointed out.

Agarwal was joined by Priya Agarwal Hebbbar, a director on the company's board, who felt the biggest challenge women in India face is in developing their mindset. She also felt women need to embody the values they set to inculcate in their children. She also sought Mr Agarwal's views on how women can achieve and maintain a fine balance between tradition and their newer, more demanding professional roles.

Vedanta is ranked among the top global companies where women feel comfortable to work and the company takes a lot of pride in it, Mr Agarwal said adding that the company will increase women representation in operational roles to 50 per cent from 22 per cent currently.

Appreciating women professionals' contribution at Vedanta's diversified business units, he also thanked the women across the Vedanta family who have always stood by their husbands and supported them allowing the latter to concentrate fully on work.

His hour-long interaction drew a lot of questions. Responding to a query from the audience, he also encouraged wives of Vedanta employees to channelise their energy and entrepreneurial spirit to contribute to Vedanta in some meaningful way – be it through technology enablement or services.

Educate Girls collaborates with Rajasthan's Directorate of Women Empowerment

As per the MoU, Educate Girls will develop a collaborative framework to strengthen planning and implementation of the state's women and adolescent girls' initiatives and reform processes

Udaipur: Educate Girls, a non-profit working in the most rural and remote villages of India to bridge the gender and literacy gaps through girls' education, today announced the signing of a Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) with the Government of Rajasthan's Directorate of Women Empowerment at Jaipur.

Discussing the MoU, Shri KK Pathak, Secretary, Women and Child Development Department, Government of Rajasthan, said, "Awareness of education, skills and social concerns are the important dimensions of women's empowerment. Based on these dimensions, there is a need to work on the ground level for the overall development of adolescent girls and women. With the MoU in place, we expect to tap immense opportunities for education and livelihood for adolescent girls and women at the grassroots."

Sharing the details of the MoU, Safeena Husain, Founder of Educate Girls, said, "With this collaboration, the government and Educate Girls can usher in behavioural, social and economic transformation in the society. It is a convergence of evidence-based policy making and our proven technology backed model." Adding more on the MoU's implementation, she said, "We will be augmenting state-level resources for enhancing and hand-holding support to carry out research and review studies. Educate Girls will also empower and educate various stakeholders on girls' education and converge with various institutions – government and non-government for sustainable development of adolescent girls and women, transforming their lives and those of their families and communities."

Elaborating on the MoU, Safeena said, "Under this MoU, Educate Girls' will set up a state-level Project Management and Implementation Unit (PMIU) that will work under an elite leadership council to deliver measurable goals as part of the multi-year partnership. The PMIU will play the role of capacity builder and ensure that the most marginalised communities get access to all government schemes." For this project, Educate Girls' PMIU will work towards convergence of all women initiatives, providing a holistic approach that will help women access various opportunities for education, skill development and livelihoods. It will also help them in understanding their political and legal rights.

Educate Girls works closely with the Government and communities across Rajasthan, Madhya Pradesh and Uttar Pradesh, in those districts with maximum number of out of school girls. The non-profit partners with the Government to ensure that girls are enrolled and retained in schools and they learn well through Educate Girls' remedial learning curriculum. In the coming years, the non-profit aims to expand its work to more educationally backward districts of Bihar.
