Real Freedom

Just yesterday we celebrated the Amrit Mahotsava (75 Celebration of Independence of India). All government, cultural, educational, social and political institutions celebrated this festival in their own way. All the activities were covered by traditional and social media. Due to Kovid-19, school children were missed in all the functions. The concern for the health of the public also restricted the events.

For a common citizen, it was a celebration of freedom with some restrictions like wearing a mask, maintaining physical distance, avoiding crowds etc. By the way, if we think with our hands on our heart, then we see new meanings of freedom. This freedom means different for the powerful people and the common people. We have got freedom from the British rule, But in the matter of self-reliance and self-discipline, the question arises whether we are free in every way? We are yet to be free from corruption, laziness, casteism, poverty, health epidemic and valueless politics. Social service are also becoming things of showing up. The meanings of freedom have been moulded by powerful people according to their convenience and are not bothered about others. Many of us give attention to the civil rights but not to the civic duties,

After getting independence, it is more important to maintain that freedom that too with mutual brotherhood and tolerance. The identity of our India is that of "Unity in Diversity". Respecting this and eliminating mutual animosity we all should progress.. By giving up our personal selfishness, adopting a contented and service-oriented nature, we can get freedom from the evil like corruption. It is said that nothing is gained without losing anything. We have also got the freedom of the country after many sacrifices. We have to sacrifice only the evils for this new freedom. Once we conquer corruption, we will win many other fronts for our betterment. With self-discipline, no work becomes difficult. Let us take two steps in this direction...
