

Yes, we all do need a caretaker

Yes, we all do need a caretaker—a caretaker for our whole life. Parents are there in your childhood to help you grow. A life partner is there in your youth to help you deal with life matters. We don't take much load on our minds or brain. But in old age, slowly, our thought processes begin to change. Parents are surrounded by their children and their next generation too. Still, when free at times, they get lost in memories. At times they realize their small or big mistakes committed in the past. Sometimes they remind their dreams fulfilled or unfulfilled. Sometimes they step forward to advise their children but are taken aback by their back foot. They keep quiet. Sometimes they feel life is going easy, but sometimes they have to make adjustments here and there. Sometimes they go emotional and spend money for the happiness and welfare of their children. But sometimes draw their hand to save money for their remaining life or grandchildren.

These all circumstances are responsible for shaping their thought process gradually. This is called development through experiences. Do you know, a person goes on learning the whole life. Where was the mistake when you have taken every big decision after brooding over it thoroughly? Sometimes mistakes are irreparable also. This all happens because no one is perfect on Earth in this world. Then how to help yourself. Make the God Almighty your caretaker. He is already your caretaker, and you haven't realized it yet. That means while doing anything, leave the results on him. No worry, no tension, whatever happens, will be the best for us. We are unknown to many things, but he is known to all the things of the past and future. That all combined has effects on the result. So accept happily whatever happens in your life. Don't take much load. Don't feel alone. If a cow is stuck in the mud, its owner will come and get it out from the mud, but if a lion is stuck in the mud, nobody will come to get it out of the mud because nobody has its custody. Nobody is its owner. The Almighty God is your caretaker, of course. He is waiting for you. Go to him. Surrender yourself before him as he is your owner, and you are in his custody. Not only believe, but you have to trust him wholeheartedly and then see the magic.
