

Is life complicated ?

Actually your attitude matters. The way you look towards objects is important, positively or negatively. The same stone seems to be a hurdle on the road blocking the way. Suddenly some artist comes there and give the stone shape of some diety. Then it is established by people in a temple near by. Now you bow before the same stone and start worshipping it. Now what happened ? What changed ? Nothing only some extra part of the stone is removed from there to give it the shape of an idol. Now your attitude has become positive. Your vision is transformed. Your perception is changed completely.

The same way, fruits and sweets become Prasad after offering to your daily. Earlier they were only fruits and sweets on the shop but after offering, they have changed into Prasad. What changed? They did not undergo any process of physical transformation but your point of view of looking at those objects is changed from normal to special. This is positivity. The same thing applies to life also. When you look at the life as full of problems, then everything becomes sorrow for you. Every situation becomes irritating for you, which worsens your condition more and more. It gives you sadness, makes you more and more dull, lessens your strength not only physically but also mentally. Decreases your level of confidence. But when you look at it as a solution of different things, then life becomes a joy for you. Everything becomes a source of happiness for you. Every situation becomes an opportunity for betterment. Every small incident seems to be a chance for you to prove yourself. It gives you excitement. Makes you more and more enthusiastic. Increases your strength not only physically but also mentally. Increases your level of confidence.

When two fast friends suddenly begin to fight with each other. Start doubting on each other. Begin to believe others than believing their fast friend. This all occurs due to some misunderstanding only. Months and months later, suddenly one day they meet their old teacher. He listens to them separately with patience. Then remove their all confusions. Now they are again fast friends. Somebody had come in between and misguided them towards each other. Now what happened? What changed? Nothing, only their attitude towards each other has become positive again. Now they have learnt the art of Let go to trivial things. So nobody can misguide them in future. This positivity is only needed in everyone's life to make it happier.

No life is not that complicated. But actually it happens that most of the time, our mind is conditioned to seek a complex solution to the problem. Our mind gets conditioned so much by the circumstances that we cannot see the obvious. When we go to a specialist doctor with a simple headache then diagnosis starts from a migraine upwards. We assume that things are complicated. And we get entrapped in the ghost of its thoughts. We carry on the same syndrome in our relationships also and make them complicated for no reason. So be simple in life. The more you are simple, the more you are happier.

Tea seller Tejram got interest free loan of 50 thousand Udaipur. The state government has implemented Indira Gandhi Urban Credit Card Scheme under the leadership of Chief Minister Shri Ashok Gehlot to provide self-employment to the youth of street vendors and the service sector.

The scheme makes interest-free loans of up to Rs 50,000 available to street vendors and people providing essential services in the informal sector. Small business people of Udaipur have also benefited from the scheme and can take their work forward by getting loans.

Tej Ram Patel, a resident of Ward 21 of Udaipur Municipal Corporation, runs a tea stall as a street vendor. He immediately reached the Municipal Corporation when he learned that the state government had implemented the Indira Gandhi Urban Credit Card Scheme. He applied for a loan under the scheme. His application was approved and sent from the corporation to Punjab National Bank, where an interest-free loan of Rs 50,000 was approved for one year.

The beauty of Barna Tree is being shattered in the Aravalli plains

Udaipur. These days, an attractive tree with a yellow, white, and light green aura seems to be hypnotizing the Aravalli litigants in the Mewar region with rich biodiversity; this tree contains unique beauty is the tree. The Barna Tree considered the most different for its rich cultural significance, diverse uses, and rigorous nature, is also known as Cretvia Religiosa or Garlic Pear Tree. This tree is a native of India and is abundant in different parts of the country.

Indrajit Mathur, an environmental subject knowledgeable, says that the Barna tree is a medium-sized deciduous tree with an average height of 10 to 20 meters. A straight, cylindrical trunk and a broad crown with dense leaves characterize it. The tree leaves are dark green and shiny, and the bark is light brown and rough textured. The flowers of the barna tree are small and yellow, and they bloom in bunches during the spring season. The tree produces a small fruit that is green and has a rugged wooden shell. Its fruit has a garlic-like smell; hence, this tree is also known as the garlic pear tree.

According to environmental lovers JP Shrimali and Saurabh Rathore, the Barna tree has been an integral part of Indian culture for centuries.

It is considered a sacred tree in Hinduism, and its leaves and flowers are used in various religious ceremonies and rituals. The tree is also known for its medicinal properties, and different parts of the tree are used to treat multiple diseases in traditional Indian medicine. The tree's bark is used as a remedy for dysentery and diarrhea, while the fruit is used as a tonic for the liver and heart. Tree leaves are used to treat skin diseases and insect bites.

According to experts, apart from their cultural and medicinal importance, there are many other uses for the Barna tree. The tree wood is hard and durable and is used to make furniture, agricultural equipment, and various household items. Tree leaves are used as fodder for animals, and fruits are used as a food source for birds and small animals. The tree is also used for soil conservation and is known to improve the soil fertility in which it grows.

Apart from its cultural and economic importance, the Barna tree has a vital environmental role. It is a rigid plant that requires less water and can tolerate high temperatures. It is also a good source of shade and helps reduce soil erosion. The tree is an essential ecosystem component and provides housing for various birds and animals.

A postage stamp has also been released:

Helpful in improving the region's ecological balance; in 1981, the Indian Postal Department issued a postage stamp on this tree, highlighting its cultural and environmental importance. The state government also places it in the category of a rare tree.

"Roti" indicates social evils and constitutional rights

Although masala films have mostly been the trend in the Bhojpuri film industry, and people are afraid to experiment here, the film Roti is seen breaking this pattern in its trailer. Filmmaker Dharendra Kumar Jha & Geeta Tiwari's Production team produced the film Roti keeping the social fabric in the center while teasing a sensitive issue. At the time of the film's release, there may be a situation of controversy regarding its content because, in the 3-minute trailer itself, high and low constitution-given rights and untouchability have also been shown prominently in this film, which some people may not like. Whose trailer has been released today? <https://youtu.be/9rVXlnPvEnA>

People are avoiding making a film on a sensitive issue

nowadays; in such a situation, filmmaker Dharendra Kumar Jha's vitality must be acknowledged because he has done a tremendous experiment with roti in Bhojpuri, out of the box. And that too in such an experiment where untouchability and caste enmity have been prominently filmed.

The success and failure of the film will be known in the coming time, but the movie based on the story of the 1970s is commendable.

You will see the deep chasm of caste and the dominant attitude of the big landlords in this film.

Dharendra Kumar Jha is the film "Roti" producer under the banner of Madhu Manjul Arts and Geeta Tiwari Production.

While the film Roti is directed by Dharendra Kumar Jha himself. The music in the movie is by Munna Dubey, while the film's executive producer is Mahesh Upadhyay.

Talking about the star cast of the film Roti, Kunal Tiwari, Kajal Yadav, Amit Shukla, Sonalika Prasad, Prakash Jaish, Sonia Mishra, Devendra Pathak, and Umakant Rai have tried to tell the value of roti with their respective performances. The campaigner is Sanjay Bhushan Patiala.

A Signature campaign launched demanding strict population control law Increasing population

Udaipur. A signature campaign was launched in Udaipur demanding strict population control law in the country.

Devendra Singh Rathore, state president of Jansankhya Samadhan Foundation, who came on the occasion, said that the rapidly increasing population and the increasing imbalance in it is the biggest challenge for the country and the most significant speed breaker in the country's development progress

In the year 2001, the population of India was about 100 crores, and today it has increased to 142 crores. If you employ one crore unemployed in a year, two crores new unemployed are taking birth. Every development plan falls short. The traffic system is becoming uncontrollable despite the expansion of roads in the cities due to the population explosion. Of the 25 most polluted cities worldwide, 8 are in India alone. We are giving our children poison in the form of air pollution. At the same time, a country that has faced a partition based on religion, tragedy, and migration is like Kashmir. Their growing demographic imbalance cannot be ignored. According to the 2011 population census, in the under-6 age group, where the population of India's indigenous religions declined by 1.73 percent, the people of a particular category grew by 9.3 percent.

Devendra Singh Rathore said that the demand of the country's people would be put before the central Government through crores of signatures.

Appealing for the participation of women in this campaign, Mrs. Sunita Pinki Mandawat, State President of the Women's Wing of Jansankhya Samadhan Foundation, said that she would directly monitor the signature campaign and awareness programs going on in Udaipur and herself through various programs from house to house. From this, it will reach ordinary people. State Vice President Narpat Singh Osaliya will take this campaign to village-to-village Dhani in the rural areas from the city itself. Foundation's city district president and former sarpanch Sita Ram Dangni and women's wing district president and councilor Mrs. Sonika Jain, considering this problem severe, announced to march to Delhi soon with lakhs of signatures and a group of youth in Udaipur city. Foundation's City District General Secretary Gajpal, City District Assembly in-charge, and former Rajsamand MLA Banshilal Khatik, Bhuwana Mandal President, were also present. On this occasion, people started this campaign by signing the leaflet.

If small ponds are not left, avoiding drought, famine, and flood will be challenging Udaipur: small ponds are getting swollen one after the other. Lake lovers have expressed deep concern over it.

In the lake dialogue held on Sunday, Dr. Anil Mehta of the Lake Conservation Committee said that due to the negligence, short-sightedness, and connivance of local bodies like Zilla Parishads, Corporations, Municipalities, Urban Development Trusts, small ponds are being bridged. Buildings are being constructed on them. The whole government lobby favors those who hurt the ponds and destroy them. If this is not stopped, we will suffer drought, famine, and flood.

Former member of the Lake Development Authority Tej Shankar Palliwai said that small ponds play an important role in flood control along with big lakes. They create underground water reserves by allowing rainwater to reach the ground. It is illegal and illegal to destroy their original form by filling them with soil.

Nand Kishore Sharma, director of Gandhi Manav Kalyan Samiti, said that small ponds are sources of biodiversity. They are the shelter of many animals, birds, and aquatic creatures. Biodiversity will be in danger if there are no small ponds.

Environmentalist Kushal Rawal said that the land of ponds is declared non-peta by manipulating the revenue documents. This conspiracy is happening in every village. Lake lover Drupad Singh urged the government to get all the ponds restricted so that the land and wet area of these ponds could be saved. Lake cleanliness Shramdaan was done before the dialogue.
