Ashok Gehlot Champions Gandhi Darshan in Udaipur

and block-level convenors and co-convenors to discuss strategies for propagating Gandhi's ideals across society.

Gehlot began the program with a symbolic offering—a garland of spun thread and lamp lighting before Mahatma Gandhi's portrait—receiving a tri-colored garland, Gandhi cap, and charkha from District Convenor Pankaj Kumar Sharma and fellow convenors. In his address, Gehlot highlighted the enduring relevance of Gandhi's philosophy, stating, "The path of truth, non-violence, and satyagraha remains the solution to modern societal challenges. Rising violence, intolerance, and extremism can only be countered through Gandhi Darshan."

He urged convenors to engage with youth, women, farmers, and students, transforming workshops into actionable efforts that promote harmony, cooperation, and mutual respect—the pillars of sustainable development. Gehlot stressed that just as Gandhi Ji achieved independence through non-violence, today's society must collectively strive to eradicate social evils, poverty, unemployment, and discrimination.

During the program, Gehlot honored families of martyrs, including the Nagoris, Zakiuddin, and war veteran Durga Shankar Paliwal, presenting shawls and mementos. The workshop also featured addresses by Prof. Satish Rai, National Coordinator, and several district convenors. A report on the committee's activities, including the creation of the Shanti evam Ahimsa Prakoshth, was presented by Pankaj Kumar Sharma, showcasing initiatives fostering communal harmony and state government programs at the grassroots level.

The session, conducted by Vishnu Sharma Hiteshi, Editor-in-Chief of Pratyush, was attended by former MLAs, district convenors, co-convenors, and family members of freedom fighters, reflecting a strong collective commitment to preserving and propagating Gandhi Darshan in contemporary India.

Udaipur witnessed a landmark divisional-level workshop of the Mahatma Gandhi Jeevan Darshan Committee at the RNT

Auditorium, graced by former Chief Minister and senior Gandhian leader Ashok Gehlot. The event brought together district, sub-division,
